HISTORY DAY - TOPIC SELECTION

Selecting a History Day topic means narrowing down your area of historical interest and focusing on a specific subject that you can manage.

Things to remember about selecting a general topic and when narrowing your topic:

- You should be interested in the subject.
- Make sure the topic fits the theme; consult your teacher.
- A general topic is significant and important enough that everyone knows about it.
- The scope of the topic should be deep and narrow. It is better to focus on one issue in detail than to cover many issues superficially.
- There should be a good range of primary and secondary resources about the topic. A local topic is often a good choice because primary documents are probably in the community where an event occurred or where a person lived.

Interest

Think about the points above. They will guide you toward topics to research. Answer the following questions to help you find your area of interest, the type of project you want to do, class curriculum requirements, and the History Day theme.

Historical Paper	Exhibit (Display)	Documentary	Performance	Website
This is the traditional form for presenting historical research and interpretation on paper, with sources.	This is a visual representation of a topic. Artifacts like photographic images, charts/graphs, quotes, and objects can illustrate the message.	Audio-visuals like videos, photos, music, interviews, slides and voice-overs explain a topic.	This is a dramatic portrayal of a topic and its significance. It should be original and creative, and may include costumes and/or small props.	This is a technological visual representation of a topic, using various digital media on an electronic device.
